++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Sunny spells and isolated showers. Blustery winds.

Today:
Bright and breezy start, with most places dry with sunny spells. Perhaps the odd shower around, most frequent across the Pennines. Despite the sunshine, feeling rather chilly in the blustery breeze. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Tonight:
Cloud thickening with hill fog across the Pennines. Outbreaks of light rain or drizzle likely, especially after midnight, and perhaps persistent in the west. Strong winds developing, with upland gales. Minimum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Thursday:
Cloudy and windy with most places dry, although further drizzle possible across western hills, mainly during the morning. Chance of a few brighter spells in the east. Mild. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Rather cloudy, and mild with drizzle in the west Friday and Saturday morning. Rain band then clearing south overnight. Turning colder Sunday, with sunny spells, showers and brisk northerly winds.
